After the attempts made by General Armstrong, and Mr. Barlow, and Mr. Crawford, to adjust the claims of our merchants against Boomparte for all the property he felomously robbed and plundered them of, we find that a change in his Imperial Majesty's cabinet is now in his Imperial Majesty's cabinet is now held out as another excess for delaying the arrangement. After he had upbraided Armstrong as being the representative of a people destitute of all the virtues which adorn and characterists a brave and independent nation, the misnister felt somewhat angry, and changed the style of his correspondence.
This not agreeing exactly with Mr. Madison's feelings towards the ruler of that wonderful people; the general had leave to return home, and Mr. Barlow was soon afterwards sent out as his successor. On his arrival; he found the essot. On his arrival, he found that Emperor so much engaged in his Russian expedition, that he had not a moment to spare to listen to the proposals sent out by him from our government.

With a laudable desire to conclude the business upon which he had been distributed, the old gentleman followed his restricted, the old gentleman followed his restricted. patched, the did gentleman followed his angust majesty on this expedition; but his constituted, bvercomb by the father of his journey, falled thim and flied thefore he could accomplish the object of his mission, or cturn facts, whence he had been been been as the politic scentish be intended by the politic scentish be

be done, at the time of his death. Mr. Crawford was therefore disputched, in great haste, to put the finialing stocke to the creaty which Mr. Barlow had suggercompleted. Such, however, had been the mistortunes of the emperor during this interval, that all the sympathy of his court was required to console him; and such was the profound gloom which hing over his affairs, when Mr. Crawford arrived, that a considerable time ford arrived, that, a considerable time blaped before he could got an audience, and even then a moment could not be bestowed on the claims of a nation he heartly despised.

A change in his ministry, it is said by his applopriate, will necessarily prograsticate the negotiation; but if the fact were known, we believe he neither mends to remunerate our citizens for the outrageous plunder committed on the outrageous plunder committed on their property, nor feels disposed to treat this government with the respect due from one government to another.

As Congress, a few months ago, laid the embargo to gratify the wishes of the president, it is probable they will now repeal it upon his recommendation, As we have neither seen nor heard of any of those effects being produced by it which the president seemed to have in expectation, and which he promised us in a former message, we must necessarily suppose, that the objects of it totally failed—Unless, indeed, the persecution of the commercial states was an object. We have never hear it said that this measure had either stated or distressed the gramy althoughts. ed or distressed the enemy, although it was represented by the father of it as one of the most efficient means of carrying on the war successfully against him. It was to be a check on that, "Illicit intercourse" carried on by some of our "defuded countrymen" with the enemy-but we have never heard, that it operated this effect, or that the officers of the revenue were that the conters of the revenue were ever put to any trouble on this account. If ever there was any necessity for this measure to put a stop to illicit trade, it would seem still to exist—by as it was rather imaginary than rethere surely could never be any occasion. on for this measure. Trial after trial has been made of this restrictive system, and it has invariably been found to produce the same ruinous consequences to ourselves, but never the effects on others which were intended. With what feelings Mr. Madison could have retired to his study to compose his late message to congress, recommending a repeal of the embargo, we confess our limited knowledge of the philosophy of the mind will not enable us to judge yet we cannot avoid thinking, there must have been a violent struggle in his bosom when about to annihilate all those " restrictive energies" which he, and his friends, always professed to consider the surest safe-guard to our liberty. These measures have been cried up to be the very acme of political wisdom, but they have served no other purpose than to distress ourselves. and draw down the ridicule of the world on our government, which resorted to them. Great and important changes, favourable to a liberation mercial intercourse, have recently taken place, we are told in the messagebut this is owing to the patriotic efforts of the allies, and not to the aid or good wishes of a majority of this nation. As we rejoiced at the brilliant success of their arms, we hope an opportunity will soon be afforded every American of seeing industry again rewarded and prosperity revive in the remotest sectione of his country.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT.

The following message was yester-day transmitted by the President of the United States to both houses of Congress-

To the Senate and House of Represen-tatives of the United States.

Taking into view the mutual interest which the United States and the foreign nations in amity with them, have in a liberal commercial intercourse, and the extensive changes favourable thereto, which have recently taken place; taking into view also the important advantages which may otherwise result from adapting the state of our commercial laws to the circumstances now existing. I recommend to the consideration of Congress the expediency of authorising, after a certain day, exportations, specie excepted, from the United States, in vessels of the United States, and in vessels of the ed and navigated by the subjects of powers at peace with them and a repeal of so much of our laws av prohibits the importation of articles not the property of enemies, but produced or manufactured only within their dominions.

I recommend also, as a more effectual safe-guard, & encouragement. to our growing manufactures, that which are to expire at the end of the exportation of special be profit bited throughout the same period. IAMES MADISON. March Sist, 1814

The message having been read, was, in both houses, referred to the committee on foreign relations.
